Dear Ms. Monika,

We want to share with you the heartbreaking reality faced by many families who have become victims of the recent devastating earthquake. Entire neighborhoods have collapsed, leaving people without homes, without food, without clean water—and without anyone to turn to.

When we arrived, we saw families sitting in the rubble of what once was their home, children crying from hunger, and elderly people with no shelter or support. No one had shared even the basics with them—until we came.

Thanks to the compassion that drove our mission, we were able to provide them with the urgent essentials they needed: food, clean water, blankets, and a small sense of hope. But the need is still overwhelming, and the road to recovery will be long.

We are asking our generous benefactors—to continue standing with us. Your support truly saves lives. With your help, we can keep delivering aid to those who need it most and remind them they are not alone.

Let's keep hope alive together.

With gratitude and determination,

Sr. Thersia Vincenza

Dear Ms. Monika,

We want to share with you a heartbreaking reality unfolding in the aftermath of the recent earthquake. Many children who were injured are unable to stay in the hospital—not because they don't need care, but because the hospitals have been badly damaged or are overwhelmed.

These children, some with serious injuries, are now being treated in hospital car parks, out in the open. They lie on stretchers and blankets under the sky, with no proper shelter, no privacy, and very limited resources.

When we saw their condition, we knew we had to act.

We went directly to them and provided what little comfort we could—clean drinking water, food, and some financial support to help with urgent needs. Their faces lit up with even the smallest signs of care. But the truth is, this is just the beginning. The need is still great.

That's why we are reaching out to you—our compassionate benefactors. With your continued support, we can bring more aid, more comfort, and more hope to these innocent children who have already endured far too much.

Please help us reach more of them. Together, we can make sure they are not forgotten.

With deep gratitude,

Sr. Thersia Vincenza
Pathein

Thanks for your generous Heart and helping Hands!
